

How to Prepare for the Digital Television Transition

A variety of web sites offer information and resources on the February 17, 2009 digital television (DTV) transition. Please find a list of those sites below:

www.DTVanswers.com: The National Association of Broadcasters has launched an aggressive consumer education campaign on the digital television transition and has developed a consumer friendly Web site that answers basic questions about the transition.

www.DTVtransition.org: The DTV Transition Coalition, a large coalition of public and private sector organizations, has come together to support the transition and help educate consumers. This site includes information about the coalition as well as information for consumers about the transition to digital television.

www.DTV.gov: The Federal Communications Commission has launched its DTV Web site, which has a variety of information for policymakers and consumers.

Converter Box Coupons: For more information on the DTV coupon program or information on how to request a coupon, please visit the National Telecommunications and Information Agency Web site at www.ntia.doc.gov/dtvcoupon/index.html. You can also request a coupon by calling 1-888-388-2009.